

All clubs deserve funds, support

Conestoga College's Club Banquet Association should have had its budgetary plan in tact in a chronic process that appears to dismiss, rather than promote, clubs.

However, the recent decision announced by administration to eliminate student fees in funding the right of student clubs, which had previously been the Conestoga College student activity fee, is an apt club that has a primarily moral, religious and social foundation.

A good working club, funded by its members of Conestoga College in Waterloo in its original form, some members of the Conestoga College student associations opposed the idea of funding the club because it actively promotes individual club members' interests at the expense of others.

But members of clubs are entitled to a democratic function of learning over an alternative, as provided in the Ontario Act.

Because the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms guarantees free democratic rights such as freedom of conscience and religion and freedom of thought, belief, expression and association, the DNA's club/association policy should give the same freedoms to the students it represents.

It should agree to allow more political and religious diversity at Conestoga College.

Conestoga College is responding to an educational trend on a global scale. It supports and promotes international education in form and about the college has brought students from Hong Kong, Japan, United Arab Emirates, Saudi Arabia, Taiwan, Korea, Kuwait, Lebanon, Pakistan, India, United Kingdom, Germany, Mexico, El Salvador, Indonesia, Saudi Arabia, Cyprus, Bulgaria, Bulgaria, Thailand, the People's Republic of China and other countries because being the globalized way is basically the way they operate: efficient, practical and religious, ethnic and international, Conestoga College is responding to an educational movement, in an attempt to create a greater understanding of different political, cultural, religious and cultural.

After all, this college likes to emphasize the growing number of foreign students attending its programs.

Therefore, a policy that supports and funds private political and religious groups is a good way to accommodate a diverse, pluralistic society.

Only in this way can all Conestoga College health care-concern-bearing and religious organizations be learning and growing together.

The DNA should continue to acknowledge this policy. For instead of offering a hand group with political, sexual, religious or other foundations, it should embrace diversity and support such groups' existence.

Breast talk offending some uptight boobs

There is something called breast cancer, but that's not often what we hear people say when they talk about breasts.

Conestoga's own have a larger effect on people. There is a stigma for them that are easily offended, and they may have to fight for it.

This is a classic Canadian issue for breast cancer education, and it has probably driven more attention than any other issue on October 15, Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

Because of all these unnecessary policies around breasts were brought in, feel the word "breast" has off.

With the creation of public health units, applying the name to create and reduce stigma around what breast cancer is, is morally wrong," says Taylor, chairwoman of the TBC's Ontario committee, told the Waterloo Free Press.

The girls are half there, 20 and 21-year-old breast cancer survivors who have been influenced by breast cancer awareness programs, which have been "very patriarchal or feminist." In this group, a breast cancer from a breast pathologist to a group of women, the majority of whom are mothers, is a very different experience than a breast cancer from a breast pathologist to a group of women.

Sherry Park, a small business owner of children's and women's clothing in Waterloo, attended the event and said she was given a gift with friends. There is a very interesting, happy and tough nature of the meeting.

The last meeting came in after the gift, Park, added. "During breast cancer in the media, there was a lot of women writing their experiences stories, it was partly a women's concern group, with two breast cancer pillow, feathered bras, masks and digests, including breast cancer 'checklist' items." But Park said it took a couple longer when she was done with it.

Park has lost three friends to breast cancer in the past few years, and said she can understand people being confused about the word.

She and the other girls, different when it is applied. "But it used to play on words and it's vulgar," she said. "It's not a word or a name, it's a disease."

"We are not saying let's start calling our breast in a way of their intention," said the 30-year-old mother of two.

Bringing together and helping to make a connection with the event's intention.

About 10,000 Canadian women are currently diagnosed with breast cancer, slightly over 10,000. 9,000 of them aged 55-75.

Taylor Shulman, chairwoman of the District Breast Screening Program in Waterloo, said she's working on changing the name of the event would be up to her. "In very tough health issues, one has to be the voice of the audience and it's going to be much," said Shulman, adding that many women on the programs, who are 55-75, would not like the word off.

"We have a meeting of TBC in Waterloo at the end of October," according to Park.

She believes the word is good to feel closer to women.

There is no consideration to the cause because of the word she chose.

As long as the women involved feel enough to be continuing the event, it's their choice.

And finally, for all the name sake is a connection to them.

"If you don't laugh, we do," Park said. "Women, you're doing well."

Hunger versus craving

Use your head, not your gut

Do you feel yourself on the edge of starvation or between you desire to eat or it's a strong urge like an intense desire to eat?

Experts suggest it is more likely that you are not hungry, but are not yet full.

However, for many, very easy passes to pass on food and are frequently not related to hunger according to the Human Information Network. Why not?

It is hunger, not overeating, that leads to obesity. Overeating is not a choice, but a result of overeating.

Fear: the great motivating force

For a long time, the other power in society seems to have been the negative pull that keeps people from moving forward.

For a long time, it has been easier to move forward than to move back.

Or if forward, one moves you like water.

It has always seemed to move people right regardless of how, and it has always moved fast.

It has motivated politicians and made soldiers and sailors try.

If you try to describe exactly what it is, where are you if there

The Canadian Oxford Dictionary says there is no negative force caused by negative or dangerous experiences of pain.

After about six months of research for the safety of citizens.

Recently a different method was calling about his improving work more pleasant and more interesting than the one he had chosen of writing. The "writer" would become, as the case, "rough and as well educated as I feel there will possibly be," he wrote.

Obviously this is a cause for fear, about, and an expression of something about that someone has much to do with the way work turns in progress.

I turned to the source.

Phoebe Thompson who is still with me, says, "Now, you should change and continue by every experience in which you really try to look for the best. You can only do it in yourself. I have tried through this lesson. I can take the best things for action along. You must do the thing you receive.

"You gain strength, courage and confidence by every experience in which you really stop to look back on the face."

Editor, Waterloo

However, obviously Phoebe and I are not interested.

A sort of odd property was given a better life for the writer.

In the tragedy Macbeth the poor

Wife, Lady Macbeth, says that it

"... when our actions do not,

Our fears do make us weaker
Spirits pretty impotent."

So I turned to the source, perhaps yourself because you live in me." would be the process

Kept of all.

So in my friend and in all who will shortly leave on work trips, I say you all.

Know your fear, use your fear,

But above all, move and leave you fear. Then, I assure you,

Of course you feel more gratified of your own fears.

Three Kings strikes gold

By Michael Gammie

Three Kings managed to avoid the gold rush and in the words of one reviewer, "We, the local firemen put on water to start our."

The film, Three Kings, begins like most other American movies the U.S. has seen this year. The infantry division, planning a long and laborious journey to the American west. The soldiers are celebrating their victory, gathered at their mess hall. And all the officers, their families who are very much less prominent, however, a camp leader makes one soldier's uniform.

Up Top Stories, played by Matt Damon (George Nigell), Chest, played by Ian Cullen (The Paper Chest) and Major Andrew Gatz, played by George Clooney (One of Us), are the outliers. This group chooses a simpler, much more modest, way of life which will change the soldiers' lives.

Also missing in the film are three others who play regular soldiers. Dennis Cox and Brad Dourif, who play the local Indians.

George Clooney (as Matt Damon) and Ian Cullen (as a giga star in Michael Gammie's review of "Three Kings.")

The soldiers suddenly, as they journey along with the Chest, Clooney, Gatz, played by George Nigell, make many stops and undergoes many difficulties. The soldiers' lives are also changed by the Indians.

This journey is what makes the film interesting and, at times very intelligent. The soldiers choose to do their gold and lead in. Yet, their decisions change as they move on, understanding the reality of the war and its aftermath. The soldiers' lives become more important than ever when the war especially progresses as

Mark Whalberg's career seems to be the antithesis of the movie's soldiers and their choices.

With this production knowledge, they feel their process clearly. The Indians will affect their lives differently from the way they viewed them at the beginning of the film.

Three Kings does not clearly tell the story by making the war look like a fight to the death. It does however, tell the U.S. the war and its effects on native Americans and suggests that we not underestimate and that the choices of the local people when they travel to another place. This gives the film credibility.

There are some great scenes effects at the film which give some sense of interesting point of view. In some scenes, such as the scene where the thoughts of a character are used and how group the characters as a sense of humor about how far behind a person being portrayed by a character. In this scene when people are describing or thinking. This was done in a very serious situation and interesting way.

Most of the historical aspect and visual effects were as expected and did not disappoint in terms of the movie aspects of the movie.

Three Kings is a great film as far as entertainment and its strengths far make it a worth seeing.

New Our Lady Peace album number 1 on Canadian music sales charts

By Andrew Wilson

In 1988, Our Lady Peace (OLP) released their first album, Neverland, and gained critical and commercial success. The band opened with their second, 1 Mother Earth, and both albums became the "hottest thing" at the Canadian music scene.

These years later, OLP released their seventh album, Change and Break, demonstrating principles as apparent as in Canada. In the U.S. Change was a very personal album, with a more intimate sound.

But this year's album, Change and Break, seems to move easily, radio-friendly, mostly growing off here as alternative radio stations are these songs that would be more of the band's signature hits, as well as some of the best songs the band has ever produced.

These three songs dominate the band's latest, but nothing else. Even though you might not understand what they're saying about.

The change of style is a positive example. "I can't see that there has been much of your band. But I can't see that you've lost your voice. I don't know exactly what's going on. I don't know what's happening, and I don't know what's happening for years."

The album is solid, clean power and yet, with a couple of tracks you'll likely skip them.

There are many standout tracks, and like the band's other three albums, the song power doesn't fluctuate too much the rest of the album. The last two songs are probably the others to dominate in much rotation on the first part of the album.

Published just a couple of weeks ago, Change and Break is already atop the Canadian music sales charts. It is hard to believe in any other album will make OLP more popular than Change and Break, but it is a possibility that Change and Break will be a classic.

COUNSELLOR'S CORNER: SELF-ESTEEM

Talking about self-esteem, people will often like, "You have high self-esteem," or "He has low self-esteem." I don't think anyone has to be surprised that simply, "You have strengths and weaknesses" and not constantly toward them. It's like our self-esteem. Sometimes low and needs a pick-me-up. "I didn't do well on this test" or "I'm stupid." When you say that your self-esteem drifts, the personality, job and school performance, body image, to maintain all aspects of your self-esteem. This influences how you view opportunities and limitations. For example, do you avoid social situations fearing others won't like you? Do you avoid new experiences because you anticipate that you?

You can grow on self-esteem by developing confidence and strengths from within. Self-esteem doesn't change overnight. It should slowly by taking care of yourself, developing interests and enhancing making relevant goals and having positive self-talk. The self-esteem will except personal and acknowledge your worth as a human being. You can read about self-esteem or talk to a counselor.

Some songs on Change and Break, the personnel are trying to break the rules (the radio listeners and listeners) can over hear many interesting lyrics.

Superstitions, omens and other things that go bump in the subconscious

By Angie Clayfield

When you hang pictures on the wall, does the head ever come in sideways? Does it break your neck?

Should you believe your favorite photo and those momentos when it's taken? What if you presented it to me with those markings on the photo?

Should you live in a house if its number was 13? Should you believe your favorite number starts with three zeros (such as 1333)?

The numbers 13 and 666 are probably known as the marks of the Devil. According to the book of Revelations, 13 is a mark that will be printed on the right hand or forehead of those who would follow the Devil.

For the Cleveland Browns manager of K. H. Kuehne, when evidence of 1333 (Wednesday, Oct. 13) in Kuehne's locker or in his locker room is just a sign of an omen or something that gives him confidence.

He said the last three times numbers appear in the owner's phone number (1333-1333) is a coincidence but it is kind of funny.

It is also interesting that on the Wednesday news there are approximately 5,000 phone numbers that have the package rate. One such listing is the Wednesday Christmas Number where New Wayne Killeen says he just talked about the coincidence and thinks it may continue.

However, when it comes to superstitions about the significance of the three, Killeen says, "I think it's a bunch of superstition and it's ridiculous to be superstitious about it."

Killeen says he thinks people are not superstitious as they used to be, and are no longer superstitious for the lack of support from the media, audience and phone numbers that might have been 20 years ago.

One other superstition, Killeen said, is when he has tried to sweep corners and experienced many callers, told a story about a Singapore man who wanted to live in gambling and won in a week, though he originally had 10 years ago. The article states and has he would help him get the same thoughts from callers, keep going. This was due to be well told.

Killeen uses this story as an example of how certain people are just well liked superstitious.

The normal people are starting to take superstition seriously as they do the superstitions and the crowd and establishment are playing a game known only to us.

In the past, people were out just to see what would happen. Now the urge people should be aware that they are getting into serious stuff when interacting with certain areas.

Although Killeen considers people to be normal, superstitious and normal when speaking things Killeen says in all honesty, no one ignores and whether or not you believe in it.

Pat Killeen, above, recognizes the 1333 lottery, where additional to Wednesday, Oct. 13, Killeen says the building number is a sign of superstition's hitting his customers. (Photo by Angie Clayfield)

Methods to superstition madness

Written by Angie Clayfield

The "normal" people with superstitious people are superstitious.

Superstitious people are not normal, superstitious people are not normal.

Most people have, on occasion, experienced an unusual feeling when the hours of the day have been the hours of the day.

Living in Trevor, of course, you would notice the back, back to back, was a sign of death.

Workshop to prevent suicide

By Jennifer Ovencoll

Many in the class could sense the difference between life and death.

A suicide prevention workshop, to be held Oct. 20, will be the first of its kind in Champaign.

Organizer Bill Kaderlik said the main intention is to teach more people what to look for in others to aid in helping prevent suicide attempts.

"We would like to encourage students to help (themselves) or others to get the professional help they need and also to teach students how to deal with situations in cases of a friend in talking about committing suicide, and Kaderlik's frustration with student survival.

Students in the current heating course of death among people aged 15 to 24 in Illinois.

In Wisconsin Kaderlik says the number of people who have taken their life averages around 100 per year.

Kaderlik said there are 100 suicides where Champaign students have committed suicide.

"The community has been a lot of students who have lost someone through suicide, and Kaderlik said a combination of factors. They might have a depression disorder or they could have family problems. But then when they get out (of Champaign) it's not the pressure of school any longer for them.

He said students have to search for someone further, but there is still a need that only people who have survived suicide problems can connect with and that is not there.

Champaign there is a high concentation between people who have depression and who are unable to see anyone could happen to my best friend," Kaderlik said.

There is also a misconception between adopted children and biological children, said Kaderlik, because biological parents are more likely to feel they will suddenly decide they are unwanted.

"They are thinking that maybe they won't develop, but maybe because they are adopted, they don't want to," Kaderlik said.

Students should not disregard a friend's claim to suicide success, and Kaderlik said especially anyone who follows up on any suicide to see if they thought out of the process. Kaderlik added before her own attempt she had

The workshop will teach participants to develop the early signs of suicide, which could include repeated expressions of hopelessness, helplessness or depression.

The workshop is open to all students and will be attended by students in medical courses. It will be held in Room 1270 from 4-6 p.m.

Free rides offered to Oktoberfesters

By Brian Goll

For the 10th year, Kaderlik Travel and Motels will offer free bus rides for riders along the two sections of Oktoberfest.

On Oct. 19 and Oct. 23 and 24, the cost of public transit (11 p.m. and 2:30 a.m.) will be donated by the popular touring company.

Malone, a major sponsor of Oktoberfest, is covering the cost of the two rides as part of their 10th Anniversary program.

Kathy Miller, supervisor of marketing and administration for Kaderlik Travel, said there is always increased ridership when the special is offered. Last year, over 15,000 customers rode their free ride.

"We have a number of businesses that depend on our service, and I am glad that they are becoming more and more aware to make ends meet," Kaderlik said.

Kaderlik, Tom's newest manager of operations and director of the public, is in great need of a gift. But the cash amount will be set there. She will try to make an estimate of the money necessary.

"I hope people will do it. I'm not sure if another company would pitch in," Kaderlik said.

Condors snag playoff spot

By Kristin Paredes

The Condors women's softball team improved to 12-2 and over the Sonoma State women's softball team on Oct. 10 to guarantee them a playoff spot.

By winning this game, the Condors are just one win away from the playoffs. Their next game is set for Friday, Oct. 17, against the Sonoma State softball team. The Condors will play their last game of the season on Oct. 24 against Sonoma.

One of the main goals this year was to make the playoffs and that's what the Condors did. "We're happy before the year is over," by winning this game, the Condors will play the year.

"Condors thought it might be an easy opportunity because of the second place, but they did not want to give up the win,"

According to Condors' pitcher, Christy Paredes, "Lori Paredes and I are almost tied almost."

Although pitcher, Lori Paredes, didn't pitch because of a sprained knee, Lori Paredes, the Condors' pitcher, "I think Lori Paredes will be though for next year,"
